

I just finished speaking to the Station Manager at the local Sinclair Broadcasting station. He informed me that he was ordered to show the documentary Stolen Honor by higher ups. What has happened to this country now that media consolidation is the order of the day? Showing this documentary days before the election is a clear example of the danger of media consolidation. Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. Sinclair's actions show why we need stronger media ownership rules. Huey Long stated something to the effect that when fascism arrived in the US, it would come in the form of Americanism. I would like to think that true patriotism involves encouraging people to seriously consider the issues and NOT have power consolidated into a handful of entities/people who care more about the bottom line and their own agendas.
